In the aftermath of the Republican win, Warren told "This Week" that the election results proved that Americans are looking for positive solutions to problems facing the country. "I think there is a sense that we need some positive solutions, not just for this election," she said, noting that she's been discussing the need for them with President-elect Donald Trump for months. "I think we have to have a unified America, not a divided America," she added. "So my plan is we have to make sure that we have a robust economy, a strong and well-paying economy so that people can afford to live in a place, own a home, send their kids to college." Warren said she hopes her new book, "This Fight Is Our Fight: The Battle to Save America's Middle Class," will help people "figure out what's going on" with the Republican agenda and have a positive plan to fight back. "We're really worried about the situation now," she said. "We have some problems in America that are very serious that need to be dealt with." "We had a lot of guys cut. Guys who were good friends of mine who I wish were here. It's going to take a long time, but it's been frustrating. There's a lot of feelings and emotions tied up in the season. This is the best team I've ever been a part of and there were a lot of players that left this organization that would tell you the same thing. I haven't experienced anything like this. There's no good way to talk about it. It sucks." * Although Gorges was a defensive leader and one of the game's best in-your-face checking forwards, he wouldn't be an easy sell for a coach or GM looking for a top-four defenseman who can play 25 minutes a game. It's hard to imagine the club trading him. The news: Gorges will be a free agent on July 1, with 24 NHL teams having interest in him. If he were to clear waivers, Boston would need to send the defenseman to Hartford for the remainder of the season. * Although Niedermayer has only played 16 games in the past five seasons because of injuries, his physical presence and leadership make him a key member of the team. He's considered the face of the franchise. This might be the last season of his contract, with the Devils looking to move him at some point in the summer. The news: Gotta love that the Devils are so sure it's the end of the line for Niedermayer. New Jersey has talked to a dozen teams, including the Anaheim Ducks, about trading for the defenseman. Only a few teams have indicated interest in Niedermayer. The most likely destination remains the Flyers, who have been trying to trade for him for months. Archives For weather I'm coming to you from the Mecca of climate science news, Copenhagen, Denmark. I haven't been in Denmark since 1998. I went with my father, mother, and two brothers. I was about eight years old. We visited the Danish city of Aarhus and then a big Viking house thing in the countryside. We came because my father was on assignment with the U.S. government. My mother wasn't allowed to go because she was pregnant with my youngest brother, so I was stuck with my dad.
